Q20. An "education scholarship account" – often called an ESA – establishes a government-funded account with restricted, but multiple uses for K-12 educational purposes. Parents can use these funds to pay for: school tuition; tutoring; online education programs; therapies for students with special needs; textbooks or save for future college expenses. Parents are only provided the level of funding that the state would have spent on their child if they remained in a public school.

In general, do you favor or oppose an ESA system? [PROBE:] Would you say strongly or somewhat favor/oppose?

Q26. In a “tax-credit scholarship system,” a government gives tax credits to businesses if they contribute money to nonprofit organizations that distribute private school scholarships.

Pennsylvania enacted such a “tax-credit scholarship program” in 2001, called the Educational Improvement Tax Credit (EITC) Program. The program’s nonprofit scholarship organizations provide scholarships to low-and-middle income students, so they can attend a private school of their choice, including both religious and non-religious schools. The student’s parent then uses the scholarship to pay partial or full tuition for the chosen private school.

Q27. In a “tax-credit scholarship system,” a government gives tax credits to businesses if they contribute money to nonprofit organizations that distribute private school scholarships.

Pennsylvania enacted a second “tax-credit scholarship program” in 2012, called the Opportunity Scholarship Tax Credit (OSTC) Program. The program’s nonprofit scholarship organizations provide scholarships to low-and-middle income students who live in a “low-achieving” school zone, so they can attend a private school of their choice, including both religious and non-religious schools.
